Summary: Kentucky Democrats growing momentum with voters

A new survey conducted by Clarity Campaign Labs on behalf of DAGA shows that Democrats are in a strong position with voters in Kentucky. The survey was conducted from August 12th to August 13th using live calls to landlines and cell phones of likely 2019 General election voters. The sample included 792 registered voters. The margin of error for this poll is +/- 3.29% at a 95% confidence interval.

More Kentuckians believe the state to be on the wrong track than heading in the right direction. 45% of respondents say Kentucky is on the wrong track, while only 34% say Kentucky is heading in the right direction. 21% say it's somewhere in the middle.

Democrats are leading in three statewide races. In the Governor's race, 48% of voters say they would vote for Democrat Andy Beshear with 39% supporting Republican Matt Bevin if the Gubernatorial election were held today. 5% would vote for Libertarian John Hicks and 4% remain completely undecided. For the Attorney General race, Democrat Greg Stumbo has a solid 7-point lead over Republican Daniel Cameron. 13% remain completely undecided on the race. In the Secretary of State race, 52% of voters say they would vote for Democrat Heather French Henry with 37% supporting Republican Michael Adams. 9% remain completely undecided.

Additionally, Governor Matt Bevin and U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell remain deeply unpopular. Kentucky Governor Matt Bevin is viewed poorly by a majority of respondents with 53% saying they view him unfavorably, while only 38% view him favorably. 41% of Kentuckians have very unfavorable views of Governor Bevin. U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell is also disliked with 56% of respondents viewing him unfavorably, while only 39% view him favorably. 43% of Kentuckians expressed very unfavorable views of Senator McConnell. As the election nears, Democrats are poised to shake up leadership in Kentucky.
